FROM BRIEF. TO FORM.

A single creative brief was translated into six distinct dimensional paper artworks, each developed as part of a cohesive visual family and prepared for consistent handmade production.

DEVELOPING THE LANGUAGE.

Material, colour and form studies explored how metallic paper could translate the visual direction into dimensional structures.

FROM SELECTION TO SPECIFICATION.

Once six designs were selected, each was developed for its designated format and prepared for production. Further refinement and testing continued as the designs moved toward their final production-ready forms.
